

Introducing Jennifer Di'ane

Jennifer Di'ane is romantic at heart and her gypsy lifestyle is reflected in her writing. Apart from having a strong interest in Tarot reading she enjoys the study of plants, herbs and their uses.

She is also an opal miner and had, until recently a tutoring school. Jennifer has a wide experience with the Montessori method of teaching.

Lately she has chosen a unusual lifestyle in the outback country of South Australia where she can pursue her writing and interests in geology and earth sciences. Coming second in the prestigious Valerie Parv Writing Award determined Jennifer's writing career.

Jennifer is: A mother with two children. Her son is a TV journalist and her daughter recently married.

With six books written and more in the pipeline her diverse lifestyle ensures her writing has unusual appeal.

A Semi-Hermit whose unique house at Miranda has romantic views to the sea from the top of the gulf to the Flinders Ranges, on one side to wild bushland on the other.

Her unusual bathroom is a pebble-sealed indoor garden with taps hidden in a plinth and the showerhead hidden in the ceiling.

Jennifer is an eccentric who adores writing and travelling in remote areas of the Australian outback.

On writing, Jennifer says imagination is a secret that we all have it, some tap into their creative muse easier than others. She believes writing is the most exciting way to enjoy one's imagination.
